GOVERNMENTS AT WORK

There's been a couple of changes by government bodies that affect real estate. Here's some of the details that may affect you.

1. GST. The Federal Government has rolled back the GST from 7% to 6% effective July 1st, 2006. This aligns with the start of the next reporting quarter. For people who are buying newly built houses over the transition period, here's the rules.

- For sales contracts written before May 2nd (Budget day) and closing before July 1st the GST on the sale is 7% (less any qualifying rebate).
- For sales contracts written before May 2nd and closing after July 1st the GST is 7% but the buyer can apply for a Transitional Rebate of the 1% after the sale is done.
- For sales contracts written after May 2nd and closing after July 1st the GST payable is 6% less any applicable rebate.

This only applies to new construction, resale homes are exempt from GST. The qualifying rebate pertains to new homes where the purchase price is less than $450,000.

The GST reduction to 6% also applies to the GST paid on real estate commissions, lawyers fees, inspections and so on. There is a real savings benefit to the public especially those in the real estate market.

2. Provincially, it's Property Tax time soon. The annual taxes due at the start of July to Township Hall have an added benefit to all principal residence owners this year. The Provincial Homeowners Grant has been increased by $100.00. For those who used to claim the $470 it's now $570. For this who are over 65, veteran or disabled the grant goes from $745 to $845. This should just about offset the increases by the Township and GVRD, Translink and School Tax .

3. On the Municipal level, the Township of Langley has sent out an edict to the Real Estate Board that the sign Bylaw will be strictly enforced. This means that no corner arrows at intersections and no arrows nailed to telephone poles. This ruling is unfortunate as directional arrows are an important part of driving people to find the listing.

The edict came along because some Realtors have abused the tolerance by the Township by leaving signs up for 6 or more months after the sale has completed. Their idea being that it's all marketing and name recognition. My personal approach has always been to use the signs until the property sells and then remove them. I feel there's a responsibility to the community not to clutter the street unnecessarily. Now the Township will remove and destroy the arrow signs of all Realtors and an important marketing tool has been lost, at least for a while.
