

Young cancer patient hits ice with Rebagliati and Reitman

By Michelle Hopkins

Seven-year-old Emily Wong has been waging a two-year war against rhabdomyo sarcoma, a rare muscle cancer that mutated in her brain.

But this Sunday, the Richmond girl will forget her disease for a while as she and six other Make-A-Wish kids take on local sports stars and celebrities in the NHL 07 Challenge in Burnaby.

Olympic snowboarder Ross Rebagliati and B.C. Lions Bobby Singh, Sherko Haji Rasouli, Lyle Green, Jason Jimenez, Ryan Thelwell and Alexis Bwenge, as well as movie director Jason Reitman will give the children a run for their money in a fun sports competition.

Some Canuck hockey players are expected to make a surprise visit.

Richmond News, Canada – Feb. 9, 2007